Module 7 – Chapter 7 Exercise

Privacy Statement URL: <https://www.intuit.com/privacy/statement/>

1. The intuit privacy statement clearly states that intuit follows an opt-in policy. Users must give permission before certain data is used or shared by Intuit.
2. Yes, the privacy statement includes provisions regarding the collection of information from children. The statement states that the services are not intended for children under the age of 13, and that the site does not collect personal information from children.
3. Yes, the privacy statement describes what happens to collected information if the company goes out of business or is sold. It states that the personal information collected may be shared and data may be transferred to the new company.

Report Conclusions:

Overall, I would conclude that Intuit’s privacy statement is very clear and touches on all relevant topics. The statement on their site is divided into different sections which are labeled, and each have their own drop-down function. This makes it clear to access each major part of the privacy statement, rather than the entire thing being unorganized and scattered on one page. They also provide all the relevant laws and regulations they follow, as well as their contact information such as office addresses, phone numbers, and emails. This is a great example of how a privacy statement should be made and displayed on any website.
